the breadth and depth of these essays are a fitting testimony to the personal and professional interests of James W. Voelz. They span a spectrum from Greek language and lexicography to hermeneutics and translation theory to interpretation and theology of both biblical testaments to contemporary issues in church and world leading scholars with a diversity of interests and in diverse contexts offer a buffet of both general and focused issues from detailed translation theory and method to the world series as a template for theological reflection from creeds and confessions to cultural and social hermeneutics readers will find much that will strengthen and challenge their study of theology and the biblical text

Two Oxen Ahead This revealing study of farming practices in societies around the Mediterranean draws out the valuable contribution that knowledge of recent practices can make to our understanding of husbandry in prehistoric and Greco-Roman times. It reflects increased academic interest in the formative influence of farming regimes on the societies they were designed to feed. The author's intensive research took him to farming communities around the Mediterranean where he recorded observational and interview data on differing farming strategies and practices many of which can be traced back to classical antiquity or earlier. The book documents these variables through the annual chaîne opératoire from ploughing and sowing to harvesting and threshing, interannual schemes of crop rotation and husbandry and the generational cycle of household development. It traces the interdependence of these successive stages and explores how cultural tradition, ecological conditions and access to resources shape variability in husbandry practice. Each chapter identifies ways in which heuristic use of data on recent farming can shed light on ancient practices and societies
